STATE ELECTIONS.

WORK OF THE GOVERNMENT.

CLOSER SETTLEMENT ACTS.

Though in 1904 the Carruthers Government placed upon the statute book a law providing for the compulsory resumption of estates for closer settlement purposes, the use was made of those powers of resumption until the Wide Administration was formed. Since then the work of resumption and subdivision has been pushed on. Three boards were created to examine and report and advise with respect to estates suitable for resumption in their respective districts. Provision was made for the resumption of estates within 16 miles of any new railway line, at a price exclusive of the enhanced value given by railway construction. The subdivision of estates by private persons was encouraged. The burdens of settlers have been lightened by postponement of payment of instalments on settlement purchases. The financial provisions of the question of the resumption of estates for closer settlement have been liberalised, so that many small holders who were previously excluded are now competent to acquire buildings under the closer settlement Acts.

THE GOVERNMENT POLICY.

- EDUCATION.
1. Free secondary education to be widely extended to country centres, together with a more liberal provision for burials.
 2. The establishment of additional continuation schools and the inauguration of trade schools.
 3. University reform, providing for Government representation on the Senate and the abolition of the tenure of the Senate.
 4. Establishment of a Women's College for encouraging domestic science.
 5. A Training Act.

THE LIBERAL MARCH.

A SIGNIFICANT FEATURE.

IMPRESSIONS OF PREMIER'S TOUR.

There is a significant feature about the Premier's campaign in the country. These packed meetings of his were largely composed of middle-class people, who went out of their way to applaud and cheer vigorously. It was the same middle-class people who, when Mr. Fisher was touring the country as Prime Minister, just before the fusion movement, they were the loudest in the country that the middle-class vote will go to Mr. Fisher's party, and that will far outbalance the vote of the other parties. Everywhere in the country there are indications of a vast Liberal awakening. On both sides, as a fact, contrasting in being carried on like a life and death struggle. The polling everywhere is likely to be heavy. Mr. Fisher's message to the country has been taken up with enthusiasm, and Liberal canvassers are constantly being met by voters on every side no appeal is necessary. The indications are that they will all be there.

During last week many rode and 50 miles to get to Mr. Fisher's meetings. The next morning after each there was a regular procession of equestrians off to their next station. These small country towns, with the lack of the Labour plank regarding land nationalisation. Whenever Mr. Fisher was referred to in the country, the storm of applause and a study of the face of those most vociferous showed them to be men of the soil. Mr. Fisher's tour was a very strong case showing the farmer where he would stand under Labour rule, and local voters would be more likely to support him. What questions they did ask were weak, and the strong Liberal backbone made organising and conducting the Premier's tour.

Mr. Fisher has acquired to perfection the knack of handling the hostile section of a crowd. He has a ready wit, and in different fashion to the methods which Sir George Reid used to employ. The Premier is not dissatisfied by force of logic, which leaves nothing more to be said. The person who interrupts, feels that his own words are being negated by the Premier's second time.

Mr. Fisher will continue his strenuous march right up till election day. He finds ample work to do in laying the ghosts of slander which he declares are continually rising in new places.

PREMIER AT DUNGOO.

"QUICK REMEDIES OF LABOUR."

POLICY OF SLANDER COLLAPSING.

FROM OUR SPECIAL REPORTER.

DUNGOO, Saturday.

The Premier received a warm welcome from the Mayor and the prominent townspeople upon his arrival by motor from Raymond Terrace to-day. But the most interesting feature of the reception was the vast audience which gathered in the evening. He was received with prolonged cheers, the loudest of approval, and other demonstrations of approval.

From the very outset the great majority of the audience was in accord with the Premier.

"I am here," he said, "to give you some idea of the leading features of my scheme. The Labour party has been very successful in the past, but it has attempted to poison the minds of the people by drawing bright coloured pictures of our monstrous and inhuman conduct."

A voice: Rubbish about inhuman.

The Premier: Rubbish about inhuman. The Labour party has been very successful in the past, but it has attempted to poison the minds of the people by drawing bright coloured pictures of our monstrous and inhuman conduct."

no, our future is entwined with that of the myriads of yellow men, who are to be found domiciled to our north. Sydney, San Francisco, Hongkong, together with some Chinese and Japanese cities, will live for supremacy in the Pacific, and these are reasons why Sydney should not take a subordinate place.

If the matter be regarded more particularly from the point of view of the future, they are, rather than as they may be, the advantages of Sydney as a naval base appear overwhelming. First of all, we have a harbour, whose equal it would be difficult to find, even if the whole world were scoured in the search. Then much money has already been expended upon naval works here. Besides what has been done by the Imperial Government, we have State and privately-owned docks, which are ready to hand and will be increasingly so in service in time of war. We have the nucleus of a shipbuilding industry, which is capable of unlimited expansion under favourable conditions. Within easy access the richest coal veins south of the line, which mean the economical production of shipbuilding material and fuel for the vessels when once they are afloat. Then, at Lithgow, there are the only iron and steel works in the Commonwealth. In regard to coal and iron, therefore, Sydney stands in a unique position. No other port of the Commonwealth is, or ever can be, so favourably situated. Then, again, if the Federal Government fulfils its pledges in regard to the capital city, Sydney will be the first great port within easy access of that centre, an additional advantage, especially in time of trouble.

These and other like conditions will doubtless operate on the mind of Sir Reginald Henderson when he begins drafting the bill for the proposed naval base. He will be reminded that the Federal Government, when once he has done this his task will have been completed, for he has not been asked to organise, but merely to advise. It will be after his work is completed that the real difficulties will arise. Parliament will then have to accept or reject, or accept his proposals with modifications. Then provincial pressure will begin to be exerted, and organised influence is ever a powerful force. It is a question more than any other that should stand above party, and above State. If the Admiralty, as the result of his unbiased investigations, can convince us by the cold, hard logic of reason, and backed up by experience, that the naval base of the Commonwealth should be somewhere else than in Sydney, we ought to be among the first to accept his finding, and we equally expect those in the other States to do so. These politicians who will have the ultimate decision in the matter, to be equally prepared to accept Sydney should Sydney be the one chosen.

THE ELECTION ISSUE.

There is now little danger of the ballot on October 14 being taken on a false issue. Thanks to the unwearying exertions of the Premier on the public platform, the Labour leaders stand today as men guilty of attempts to distort facts and to deceive the people. In thus clearing the air Mr. Wade has rendered a great service to the cause he leads. He is rendering a further service by setting in motion a wave of opinion, which is sweeping over the country and heartening the men and women fighting in the Liberal army. The outlook is excellent. It could scarcely be otherwise while the true issue stands out clear and well defined. The choice of the electors lies between a principle and a negation; between a party that is associated with sound and beneficial legislation and a party associated with fanciful theories and with extreme curbs between tried and experienced with the officers and men of the King's ships who have from time to time been stationed in our waters has been peculiarly pleasant, and we believe beneficial to us, if not to them. This close association has, we feel sure, done much to foster that Imperial spirit which is, perhaps, more pronounced here than in any of the other capitals of the Commonwealth. We are desirous, therefore, that our claims to continue to be Australia's chief naval port should be presented in the most favourable light possible, always consistent with the well-being and security of the Commonwealth as a whole. It cannot be expected, however, that Sir Reginald Henderson will be actuated in his choice by any other consideration than the common weal of Australia and of the Empire, of which even now he is an untiring part, and probably in the future he will be destined to occupy a position of still greater importance. So, while mentioning some of the claims of Sydney, it should be made clear that this is done in no provincial spirit. While desirous of holding up our own end with as much vigour as we can, there is no desire to depreciate or derogate from the claims of other ports. It is fully realised that there is too much at stake to admit of any other consideration to be put forward as the paramount test of the public interest.

strong enough to stand firm against it and declare that the public interests must be ever his first care? Mr. McGowan must be content to be judged by his acts. His attitude over the Newcastle strike answers the question with an emphatic "No."

BRITISH UNIONISM.

Mr. Osborne must be satisfied by this time that he has attained to something more than the limited form of immortality which comes to the parties in a leading case. Even the Taff Vale decision must yield in importance to the judgment in his case. The legislation which followed the Taff Vale case was claimed by its advocates to have done nothing more than restore to trades-unions the position they had occupied before the Taff Vale decision. The Osborne judgment has already been novel and important. The judgment, although both Courts of Appeal were unanimous, was not put by all the Judges on the same ground. Some of them were content to treat a trades-union as an ordinary company, and to say that the proposed law was not within the powers conferred by statute, and that these being the only legal grounds, were therefore illegal. This had been the only ground it could have been held by legislation. Others of the Judges, however, took a quite independent ground. They held that any contract by which either a member of Parliament or an elector bound himself to vote in a way which might not be in accordance with his conscientious opinion, was against public policy, and therefore void. The actual question decided was that members of Parliament were not to be prevented by their constituents from exercising their votes in the way they thought fit. The immediate consequences were that Labour members could not be supported, as formerly, by means of compulsory levies. The second consequence was that payment of members seemed likely to become a question of urgent importance, and that a rising politician, Mr. F. E. Smith, accepted the office of leader of the Tory Democrats in succession to the late Lord Randolph Churchill. It is tolerably certain that payment of members will be discussed during the next session of Parliament and the ensuing general election. Meanwhile public attention will be directed to the recommendation of the Labour executive to their annual congress, that for the future members of the party shall subscribe to no pledge, but shall be free to exercise their own discretion. The recommendation, if it is adopted, will certainly do a great deal to obtain for the Labour party the legislation it desires.

So long as the pledge was in force Labour members were unable to assist Liberal candidates. In the future they may be able to make what arrangements they please. Many Liberals would have hesitated to support the payment of members to no pledge, but shall be free to exercise their own discretion. The recommendation, if it is adopted, will certainly do a great deal to obtain for the Labour party the legislation it desires.

LABOUR AND CAPITAL.

WALES COAL FIGHT.

THIRTY THOUSAND TO STRIKE.

INDEMNITY FOR THE OWNERS.

LONDON, Sept. 30.

In connection with the trouble at the Cambrian Coalfield, South Wales, Mr. D. A. Thomas, M.P. (Liberal) for Merthyr, states that the Employers' Association will pay the Cambrian Coalfield during the strike an indemnity exceeding the profits, while the miners' strike pay will amount to 15s per week, instead of their average earnings of from 30s to 40s per week.

Shortly there will be 30,000 men on strike from the South Wales collieries. Eight thousand colliers struck work yesterday, notices from 12,300 to discontinue work expire to-day, and 9,000 miners of the Cambrian Coalfield pits tendered notices yesterday to cease work.

Much of the trouble is due to the employment of non-unionists who have come from the north, where work in the quarries is slack, and who refuse to join the union.

Mr. Thomas, M.P., is a good speaker, and his personality is much to be desired in the House of Commons. He is a Liberal, and is doing all he can to help the miners.

At one time in my younger days I thought it sufficient that Parliament should consist of men of ability, but now I am prepared to say that the great desideratum is that your public men should be men of honour, ready to put their own names to what they say.

Country electors might make a note of this: Mr. Thomas, M.P., is a good speaker, and his personality is much to be desired in the House of Commons. He is a Liberal, and is doing all he can to help the miners.

DYNAMITE OUTRAGE.

NEWSPAPER OFFICE DESTROYED.

MANY LIVES LOST.

UNION REVENUE STOPPED.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 1.

A terrible explosion, followed by a fire, occurred in the building of the "Los Angeles Times," California, at midnight yesterday. The building was completely destroyed, as well as the plant. The damage is estimated at $200,000.

Crowds of men who were out on the streets watched the flames fall backwards from the windows into the fire.

The explosion is a mystery, as all plant was worked by electricity.

Later accounts show that 10 bodies have been recovered, and that 20 men are missing. Many people were seriously injured.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 1.

Deaths were today found in the homes of the secretary of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association, and of General Ots, editor-in-chief of the "Los Angeles Times."

The death toll is 13. Several editors leaped from the windows of the building, and were killed by the fall.

Newspapers of the city, in special editions this evening, charge the labour unions with the responsibility for the bomb explosion. General Ots is a millionaire who has fought the unions for 20 years. He employed no union men.

The bomb found at the residence of General Ots was concealed in a suit case, hidden in a vine outside the drawing-room of the house. The chief of police took the bomb in an automobile to a neighbouring park, where it exploded as the detectives for their lives. The neighbourhood is panic-stricken.

The bombs found outside were those in the explosion. The mechanics weighed 50lb. General Ots arrived from Mexico, and was cheered by a crowd at the railway station.

The police have found that the dynamite of the bomb exploded was used in the work at an aqueduct in the locality. It is probable that they thus have a clue to the perpetrators of the outrage.

AN INEVITABLE COMPARISON.

REWARDS OF WORK AND SPORT.

LONDON, Oct. 1.

The estate of the late Mr. George Howell, who represented the North-East Division of Bedford Green from 1885 to 1895 in the House of Commons, and who was secretary of the London Trades Council, has been sworn for probate purposes at £210.

The estate of the late Thomas Lotes, a jockey, who died suddenly at Brighton a few days ago, is valued at £250,000. His fortune was due to his acting as an adviser of the late Lord Lotes, of Belgium, and Lord Rothschild in the matter of investments.

Lotes, previous to his death, had been suffering from weeks from alcoholic dementia. He was found dead after a fit. A verdict of death from natural causes was returned.

NEW NATIONALISM.

MR. ROOSEVELT'S PLATFORM.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 1.

Mr. Roosevelt has opened the campaign in New York State. He declares that the party of New Nationalism stands for honesty in public life, for efficiency in the Government service, and the right of the people to freedom from outside control.

The American Mining Congress, which is sitting at Los Angeles, has unanimously declared for State control of national resources, and against the national conservation policies of Mr. Roosevelt and President Taft.

EXPLOSION IN A MINE.

MEXICANS ENTOMBED.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 1.

It is reported that 100 miners have been killed at a mine at Palen, Mexico.

The disaster at Palen was caused by an explosion of gas. One hundred and fifty miners, comprising natives and Japanese, are entombed.

REMARKABLE MURDER CASE.

IMPLICATION OF A FATHER.

VANCOUVER, Oct. 1.

A remarkable murder trial has concluded at Barrie, Ontario. Mary Dolan and Thomas McNulty have been found guilty of the murder of an illegitimate child of the former, and have been sentenced to death.

The case is unique, inasmuch as McNulty never saw or touched the child whose death is charged against him.

AUSTRALIA'S INDUSTRY.

IS AMERICA THE MODEL?

VANCOUVER, Oct. 1.

Mr. McKenzle, Victorian Minister for Lands, attended the irrigation congress at Pueblo Colorado. In the course of a speech Mr. McKenzle said that Australia was more and more looking towards America for methods of accomplishing irrigation development.

Mr. McKenzle declared that the generous terms offered to settlers in Australia were making closer settlement progress more rapidly than was expected.

PAYMENT OF MEMBERS.

REVISION TO ANCIENT LAW.

LONDON, Sept. 30.

The "Law Journal" says that a simple solution of payment of members is to be offered by the House of Commons, and to make payment enforceable against the rates.

In ancient times members of Parliament were paid wages by the constituencies they represented. According to Mr. "Parliamentary Digest" some boroughs were even allowed to elect a representative on the basis of what they considered a heavy burden—the expense of maintaining their members. The House of Commons, however, is now a knight of the shire, and is to be a citizen or burgess. According to Todd the practice continued generally until the time of Charles II, when a certain party of the kingdom to a much later period, was it gradually fell into disuse.

SUBMARINE'S LONG VOYAGE.

LONDON, Sept. 30.

A French submarine has voyaged an Atlantic distance of 1400 miles without a hitch.
